Russian Government Updates Formulas for the Co-Financing of Economically Important Regional Agricultural Programs. Government Resolution No. 167 of February 27, 2015, approved changes in the rules on the distribution of subsidies from the federal budget to provincial budgets for support of economically important programs. Subsidies for “co-financing” cover economically important regional programs in the field of crop production (development of the linen industry, development of the rice industry, and restoration of soil fertility), in the field of livestock production (prophylactics and prevention of the spread of African swine fever), and in the field of meat production (development of the meat industry). The updated rules provide formulas for the calculation of the share that each region accounts for in the total federal subsidy, and outline federal “co-financing” for certain regional programs. In order to apply for co-financing, regions are expected to conclude an agreement with the Ministry of Agriculture. <http://www.mcx.ru/>

The Government Amends Rules for the Quota Distribution System for Fish and Seafood.

On February 28, 2015, via Resolution #180, the Russian government approved amendments to the rules for bidding on quota volume, via auction, for production (i.e., catch) of “water biological resources.” The current Resolution amended Government resolution#602 of August 12, 2008. Regional offices of the Federal Fishery Agency (in the past it was only the Federal Fishery Agency itself) will now be organizers of these auctions and must comply with the budgetary code of the Russian Federation. http://government.ru/dep_news/17080/

Government Order No. 286-p of February 23, 2015, increased the Charter Capital of Rosagroleasing by 2 billion rubles. The additional funds shall be used by Rosagroleasing to support farmers' purchases of modern agricultural machines and equipment of
